The Search of Papers using EconLit

Once it is known which paper is sought for (title, authors, year, journal name are known, i.e. “Risk-Taking and Risk-Sharing Incentives under Moral Hazard” by Belhaj, Bourles, and Deroian in AEJ: Microeconomics in 2014), then, the EconLit depository could be used for getting access to its full-text version. The Search of Papers using EconLit

1. The “Databases” directory contains EconLit among other literature and data depositories

Fulltexts, Abstracts

- Cambridge Journals Online
- EBSCOhost Research Databases
- EconLit with Full Text (EBSCOhost)

Direct access form computers at CERGE-EI
Remote access through CAS
2. Taking to the EBSCOhost EconLit “Advanced Search” page

2.1. Entering paper attributes into the search form

a. Title of the paper, last names of authors, and source (the journal name) are entered in search lines:

b. Year of the publication is entered further down the page
2.2 The result of the search is seen below

A note:

Using EconLit directly is more reasonable when a paper sought for is published in a core professional journal. Otherwise, especially when a paper is published in some working papers series or in a non-economic journal, it is more reasonable to use the other two alternatives depending on available information.
